Functional Description & Business Requirements

Functional Description & Business Requirements

Summary will be a blog entry belonging to an admin user. Blog will be called "evidence_lab" (instead of the default "main")

- Each week will be a new entry in the blog such as:
 - o /blogs/adminuser/evidence_lab/2008/10/01/week-1
 - o /blogs/adminuser/evidence_lab/2008/10/01/week-2
 - o etc
- Comments will be comments for this blog entry
- The videos and photos will go into photo and video albums for the admin user. A new album will be created each week called: "EvLab Week 1", "EvLab Week 2", etc.
- EVPs will be files that will have to be loaded manually into the `htdocs/themes/jth/` folder
- A config file will be used to link all these items together on one page
- Will have to create custom UI to allow a specific username (the admin user) to be able to select a drop down of different blogs to add an entry to. I.e.:
 - o main
 - o evidence_lab
 - o tutorial_1
 - o tutorial_2
 - o expert
- This admin user will also be able to create new blogs such as "tutorial 2" etc.

Functional Description & Business Requirements

Each "expert" will have to enter these blog entries into a specific blog called "expert"

- If there is more than one expert then we cannot do all the functionality on this page without Platform work. We cannot show a blog archive that denotes blogs from more than one person. Archives are all per user. So we'd have to break the archive down per expert as a workaround.
- We can aggregate blogs from multiple people if the blog name is the same (which it will be)

Functional Description & Business Requirements

This should be handled by an administrative blog called "resource_list"

- o Each entry will tagged as one of "URLs", "Books", "Movies", "Expert Suggestions", we can then list blog posts that are tagged with these itmes.
- o This page will use the tags above in a hard-coded manner. So if a new category (or tag) is needed we will need to manually add it into the list.
- o Create a config for the categories / tags so we can easily add/edit them
- o As these are blog entries, we can rate and comment them with ease.
